The workshop is designed for individuals who are responsible for the care and supervision of those affected by prenatal alcohol exposure with an emphasis on the neuro-behavioural consequences.

Participants will come to understand the developmental trajectory of this disorder within the context of providing environmental supports.

The workshop will also entail a review of FASD as a brain-based physical condition with behavioural symptoms that often goes misunderstood and then move into the development of a framework for intervention.

There will be opportunities for participants to learn how to make decisions for support in person-specific accommodations.
